

My role model – Kate Middleton

The biggest dream of every little girl is to be a princess. Kate was an ordinary girl from an ordinary family. When she has met William, her life has changed from basics. When someone says “role model” I always think about Kate.

Why is Kate my role model? First and most important reason is that she is helping children and lots of charities. I always see on the social sites that she is travelling around the world and she is helping people. There are lots of kids who are smiling because of her help and she is making them happy. She is making them happy even though they are hungry or thirsty or they have nothing to wear. I love that she isn't so selfish. I love that she can share what she has.

She is princess. She can have whatever she wants. The whole world admires her. And she has kept her modesty. Few days ago I have read an article about her “ordinary” dress. It was presented as a scandal. For me, it is one more reason why she is my role model. She realizes that she is more mother than princess. And she knows she has to take care about her children not about what do wear. She tries to be an ordinary person like us. She don't have problem to wear something more than once.

Nevertheless, for me, she is still fashion queen. I love her style. And I love how she looks. When I look at her, I see an optimistic, happy and modest woman who is here to helping people.

I know, I would never be a princess. But some day, I want to be like Kate.
